Dear Saatva Finance Team,

I have knocked on more than 1,000 doors selling a service to homeowners, so I understand something about Saatva that a spreadsheet alone cannot teach: the hardest part of a consumer business is earning trust one household at a time, and the finance team's job is to make sure the company can keep doing that profitably as it grows. Your Financial Analyst role, supporting budgets, forecasts, cash flow, and reporting during a retail expansion, is exactly the kind of work I want to do. I hold a BS in Computer Science with a 3.8 GPA and am currently pursuing an MS in Finance and Investment Management at Sacred Heart University.

You are looking for someone from a highly quantitative environment, and that describes the last three years of my work. From 2022 to 2025 I taught myself MQL5 and NinjaScript, designed algorithmic trading tools for futures markets, and built software that generates futures trading strategies. I marketed it myself and sold packages to roughly five clients, producing four-figure revenue. I also did contract work converting clients' manual trading strategies into automated algorithms, which meant extracting the exact logic behind each decision and encoding it so a machine could run it without error. I will be straightforward about Excel: my background is in code rather than spreadsheets, but the functions you list, lookups, Index/Match, pivot tables, and nested IF statements, are the same logic I write in Python and C# every day, and I pick up tooling fast. The harder skill, which I already have, is understanding what a number means and explaining it clearly to someone who does not live in the model.

I also know what cash flow feels like from the inside. I founded Rodriguez Pressure Washing LLC in 2023 and have run every part of it since, from scheduling and buying and maintaining equipment to pricing jobs and keeping customers coming back. When you own the business, every equipment purchase is a cash flow decision and every slow week is a forecasting lesson. During my internship at Edward Jones I validated client records and researched investment strategies for senior management, work where accuracy was the whole job. Playing D1 soccer for a team ranked third nationally in the NAIA, and earning the Champions of Character Award, taught me urgency, preparation, and how to be useful to a team under pressure.

I am hardworking, I learn fast, and I take real pride in getting things right the first time. I would welcome the chance to talk about how I can help Saatva's Corporate Finance team scale intelligently. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Diego Rodriguez
