Dear Serve Robotics Finance Team,

Serve is doing something I find genuinely exciting: putting robots on real sidewalks in Los Angeles, Miami, Dallas, Atlanta, and Chicago and making the economics of every delivery work. The Financial Analyst, FP&A role caught my attention because it asks for someone who can build models, explain them to people who are not finance specialists, and use scripting and AI tools to make reporting faster and more accurate. I hold a BS in Computer Science with a 3.8 GPA and am currently pursuing an MS in Finance and Investment Management at Sacred Heart University, and that combination is exactly what I have been building toward.

Your posting asks for comfort with scripting and workflow automation, and that is where I am strongest. From 2022 to 2025 I taught myself MQL5 and NinjaScript, designed algorithmic trading tools for futures markets, and built software that generates futures trading strategies. I marketed it myself and sold packages to roughly five clients, producing four-figure revenue. I also did contract work converting clients' manual trading strategies into automated algorithms, which means taking a process someone runs by hand, understanding every decision inside it, and rebuilding it so a computer runs it reliably without them. That is the same skill your team needs to automate complex reporting. I am proficient in Python, have published a mobile app called Agora on Google Play, and am eager to put tools like ChatGPT to work on the reporting and scenario work you describe.

I also know what it means to own a result from start to finish. I founded Rodriguez Pressure Washing LLC and have run every part of it since 2023, from knocking on more than 1,000 doors to scheduling, buying and maintaining equipment, and keeping customers coming back. During my internship at Edward Jones I validated client records and researched investment strategies for senior management, which taught me to produce work that someone else has to rely on completely. Playing D1 soccer for a team ranked third nationally in the NAIA, and earning the Champions of Character Award, taught me to prepare, do my job, and put the team first. My experience is less traditional than the three years of financial analysis you list, and I would rather say that plainly than pretend otherwise. What I bring is a track record of learning unfamiliar systems quickly and getting them right.

I am hardworking, I learn fast, and I take pride in finishing things correctly. I would welcome the chance to talk about how I can help Serve's business units make better decisions with better numbers. Travel a few times a year is no problem. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Diego Rodriguez
